MIMUN 6.0

VANSH MANIYAR

Leveraging a five-year background in diplomacy, competition, and strategy, he brings experience spanning 40+ national and international MUNs and multiple Executive Board appointments. As a passionate cricketer, dedicated trader, and aspiring entrepreneur, he translates a competitive field mindset into the MUN arena and financial markets. Whether negotiating blocs, reading a game, or analysing markets, leadership and calculated decision-making remain at his core.

ADITYA KIRAN

He spends a significant amount of time researching global economic affairs and contemporary geopolitical developments, where his aptitude for structured, articulate debate, supported by comprehensive analysis and adherence to foreign policy principles, allows him to contribute meaningfully in every committee he is part of. Similarly, he looks forward to engaging with representatives on substantive evaluation of issues, with an emphasis on depth and understanding rather then mere presentation of facts.

JYOTIRADITYA SINGH

From drafting resolutions to steering debate, the journey continues on the other side of the dais. Jyotiraditya Singh is defined by a relentless pursuit of diplomacy, critical thinking, and meaningful discourse. Having experienced Model United Nations from both the delegate's desk and the dais, he understands that the true spirit of MUN extends far beyond procedure, it lies in the exchange of ideas, the art of negotiation and the ability to transform disagreement into consensus. Over the years, Jyotiraditya has amassed a wealth of experience across numerous committees, making him a respected and sought-after figure, particularly in UN committees, where his insights and expertise have left a lasting impact. For him, the dais is not merely a position of leadership; it is a responsibility to inspire confidence and ensure that every delegate leaves the committee having learned something new. Whether guiding first-time delegates or pushing experienced participants toward higher standards of debate, his goal remains the same: to make every committee a platform where ideas matter, diplomacy thrives, and future leaders are shaped.
